

ALLIES BOMB GERMAN AIR FIELDS IN GREECE

The War Today...
By DeWitt MacKenzie
AP War Analyst

NATURE AT her best generally can beat man at his worst, and the autumn deluge finally has produced almost impassable seas of mud which have brought the fighting on the Russo-German front to a near standstill in many sectors of the thousand-mile line.

This was to be expected, however, and I'm sure that readers of this column already had their rubbers on and umbrellas ready, having received warning weeks ago. The downpour is no phenomenon such as evoked the observation from Calus Marius—the Doughty Roman of a century B. C. also beat the Germans—that "extraordinary rains pretty generally fall after great battles." The Russian flood and mud are fixtures for this time of year—war or no war.

From now until the ground freezes in mid-November much of the eastern front will be a morass. There will be fighting, probably some of it very fierce, but a general lull is in order—a Godsend to the fighting men of both sides who for months have been under a strain almost beyond human endurance.

This slackening off in the fighting will give both sides a chance to pull up their socks. Already the Russians appear to be getting set for a big winter offensive which will capitalize the sensational gains of the summer. This can't come until the ground freezes, and last year the Muscovites didn't get going until Nov. 19.

Even at that date the big rivers aren't well frozen, though the ground is hard enough for the movement of troops and equipment. For instance, the Dnieper, astride which much of the fighting front now rides, doesn't freeze in most places until mid-December or later.

REFLECTING the possibility of another huge offensive, the Moscow newspaper Pravda describes a fighter plane factory where production has more than doubled in a year—without additional equipment and with five per cent fewer workmen. One of the planes produced at this plant is a new wooden-fuselage fighter which is regarded as among the Soviet's best warplanes.

While we are on the subject of offensives and warplanes, I've been asked to explain why it is that the Nazis haven't been bombing Moscow and other Russian cities well behind the fighting front, and why the Reds haven't been attacking German cities like Berlin.

Well, there are several reasons. Foremost we must place the fact that the fighting which has been raging along the Russian front since last winter has day by day been producing some of the most terrific air battles of the war. To give a single example at random, in May 17 of this year Moscow announced that the Red air force had destroyed 1,300 Nazi planes in two weeks. The Russian casualties weren't given. The losses in men and machines for many months past have been staggering.

In short, the demand for fighting planes and bombers along the front has been so heavy that neither the Russians nor the Germans appear to have had either the time or equipment for many long-range adventures elsewhere. Last year the Russians, in cooperation with the British, did do considerable long-range bombing.

TROOP BARGES OF JAPS SUNK IN SOLOMONS

U. S. Destroyers Sink at Least 40 Crafts Laden With Evacuees

(By Associated Press)
U. S. HEADQUARTERS IN THE SOUTH PACIFIC, Oct. 5.—Attack- ing U. S. destroyers turned waters of the central Solomons into a scene of "chaos and complete confusion" for Japanese attempting to evacuate men and supplies by large from besieged Kolombangara island.

A naval spokesman at South Pacific headquarters, describing two successive night actions Friday and Saturday when 40 or more barges were sunk or damaged, said today a force of Japanese destroyers attempted to intervene. He added:

"On Saturday destroyers intercepted a heavy concentration of at least 20 large enemy barges and many smaller ones. Most of the large craft were sent to the bottom."

At midnight Saturday, destroyers encountered a formation of Japanese gunboats similar to American sub-chasers.

These fast, light, maneuverable enemy craft were promptly attacked. One was sunk and others damaged. They fled in the direction of Choiseul island, 50 miles north of Kolombangara.

The only ground activity on the Southwest Pacific front was reported from Allied troops moving northward along the Ramu river in interior New Guinea to envelop the Japanese along the north coast of the island between Finschhafen and Madang.

The communiqué said this force has reached a point 100 miles from Lae and only 40 miles from the northern coast below Madang.

TAX PROGRAM IS REJECTED

House Committee Prepares To Draft Measure to Yield Half Amount

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—The administration's $10,500,000,000 tax program was as good as scrapped today and the house ways and means committee began drafting a revenue measure of its own which may yield only half as much.

The administration plan was torpedoed shortly after it was launched, when Rep. Doughton (D-N.C.), leading congressional tax authority, termed it "unbearable" and in some respects "untenable."

The 79-year-old ways and means chairman said "unbearable increased burdens" might well have a tendency to break down the taxpayers' morale.

Equally chilly was the reception on the Republican side of the committee. Rep. Carlson (R-Kan.) said "I don't think we can add this burden to the middle class group. We won't be able to raise more than $4,000,000,000 in additional taxes."

As economic stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson prepared to go before the committee in an effort to salvage as much as possible of the administration program, new talk was heard of a drive to enact a federal sales tax.

One of Vinson's chief arguments is expected to be that higher taxes are needed to stave off an inflation threat.

Presented by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, the administration program proposed an increase of about 40 per cent in the amount of federal revenue to be taken from personal incomes, with surtax rates to be more than doubled for individuals with taxable income between $1,000 and $6,000.

It asked for steep increases in levies on corporation and on such articles as liquor and tobacco products. It would place new taxes on soft drinks and chewing gum.

PLEADS INNOCENT TO TRAFFIC COUNT

LISBON, Oct. 5.—George Dewey Hull of Akron, arrested Saturday on a secret indictment charging him with second degree manslaughter, entered a plea of not guilty when arraigned before Judge Joel H. Sharp Monday afternoon and was released under $500 bond pending trial.

Hull's indictment followed the fatal accident at the intersections of Route 7 and 14 last Sept. 4 in which Warren Evans, coal truck driver of near Unity, was crushed under his overturned truck.

Hull, driver for the National Cylinder Gas Co. of Akron, was enroute east on Route 14 with a truck load of dry ice and Evans was traveling north toward Youngstown with a load of coal at the time of the accident.

Salem Grade School Plan Wins Praise

Teachers Commended By Specialists Who Conducted "Workshop"

Salem elementary school staffs won high commendation from Dr. Harold G. Shane of Columbus and other consultants who conducted a workshop in elementary education here last week.

The workshop, one of the few ever held, and the first in Salem, is a new plan of education study.

Dr. Shane, director of the survey, rated Salem among the highest in elementary schools he has visited during the last two years.

Three reading specialists in the group were well pleased with the work of Salem teachers who were complimented on their work in that department, Supt. E. S. Kerr reported.

The workshop, sponsored by the state department of education, Kent and Ohio State universities, was held to study teaching problems and methods and to develop improvements in handling elementary subjects.

Consultants who visited classrooms, meeting with teachers and school staff members, included: Dr. Shane, elementary curriculum director of the state department; Mrs. Ethel K. Howard, elementary supervisor in Lakewood schools; Dr. Wilma L. Garnett, head of the reading and language arts department of Kent university; Dr. Larry W. Harding, of the department of elementary education.

Episcopal Central Council Proposed

CLEVELAND, Oct. 5.—A recommendation for creation of a "central council of the United Nations as an organ to cooperative action in prosecuting the war and organizing the peace" was deliberated by a committee of Protestant Episcopal church clerical and lay deputies today, preparatory to its presentation for debate in the church's 54th triennial convention.

The recommendation, part of a report of the church's joint commission on social reconstruction, was approved by the house of bishops, and sent today to the house of deputies committee on canons.

The report was presented by the Rt. Rev. William Scarlett, bishop of Missouri, and advocated "international collaboration in dealing with those common world problems which are capable of no purely national or regional solution."

The balance of the national fund, $2,936, is for national administration expenses and contingency fund.

Salem's annual Community Chest campaign, formerly conducted in May, was moved up to October to combine it with the national campaign. Money raised last spring was used to carry the local agencies during the interim, from the May to the October campaign. From now on only one campaign will be conducted each year, in October, instead of the annual drive in May.

CONTINUE PROBE OF WOMAN'S DEATH

Police at East Liverpool Resume Questioning Husband of Victim

Questioning of John Lyons, husband of the slain Alice Neilson Lyons, 17-year-old bride of five months whose body was found Saturday on a wooded hillside near East Liverpool, continued today as authorities sought to learn the movements of the young woman after her husband last saw her on Aug. 20.

The husband, who reported his wife missing Aug. 20, says that he left her at their home in the afternoon to go to Midland, Pa. steel plant where he works, for his pay and when he returned at 10:30 that night she was gone. He has steadfastly denied all knowledge of the death of his wife, whose nude body was discovered by schoolboys.

Lyons and other relatives and friends were questioned by Sheriff George Hayes and Police Chief Hugh McDermott yesterday, but were unable to throw any light on the circumstances of Mrs. Lyons' death. Authorities believe that the woman may have been beaten and strangled in an automobile, and the body carried to the place it was found.

The sheriff said he was investigating a report of a disturbance in a roadside cabin in the vicinity where the body was found between two men and a girl at about the time of Mrs. Lyons' disappearance, but they had learned nothing definite to connect the reported incident with the crime.

Charles Haldi is chairman of the banquet committee and W. R. Pearce and R. L. Hutcheson, the program.

Commander T. H. Coyne said that plans for the affair will be completed at the next meeting Oct. 18.

Transportation will be provided for local Legionnaires attending the county council session Friday night at Wellsville. Members will meet first at the Legion home at 7 p. m.

The first electric charge struck him at 8:02 p. m. He was pronounced dead by prison physician Dr. J. B. Eckstrom six minutes later.

Mary Jane's body was found June 4 behind the apartment in which she lived with her widowed, invalid mother. Ralph lived in the same building.

He had served 11 years in Mansfield reformatory for shooting two women who resisted his advances.

American and British Soldiers Continue Their Advance on Land

BULLETIN
ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, Algiers, Oct. 5.—German troops four to five divisions strong are throwing increasing resistance against the Allied advance in Italy, it was announced today.

By WES GALLAGHER
ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, Algiers, Oct. 5.—Powerful Northwest African air armadas—some flying from Italian bases—in a thundering two-pronged attack hammered Nazi airfields in Greece and blocked the German reinforcement road into Italy by smashing bridges in the Brenner pass rail city of Bolzano, it was announced today.

On the land in Italy, American troops who crossed the Calore river drove nine miles southwest of Benevento yesterday to seize Montecassino on the lateral road to Naples. Reinforcements were poured into British-held Termoli on the Adriatic.

Eighth army troops have pushed more than 10 miles north of Termoli and now stand but 40 miles from Pescara, it was announced. Pescara is at the Adriatic end of the main lateral road running eastward from Rome.

Four to five German divisions along a line from coast to coast in Italy are putting up increased resistance to the Fifth and Eighth army advances, however, it was stated officially.

Liberators and Mitchells pounded at air bases in Greece, supporting the British defense of Coo in the Dodecanese, with the Mitchells making the attack from New bases in Italy itself. It was the first attack on Greece from this theater.

Co sirca Evacuato
Corcia has been evacuated, Berlin announced, giving the Allies a great new air base and potential invasion springboard of southern France or northern Italy.

The Brenner pass feed line from Germany was again blocked by Flying Fortresses that destroyed railroad yards and bridges at Bolzano over the Isarco river.

The double blows on Italy and Greece were a new function of the strength of the northwest African air force, now able to lunge out to take German pressure off Coo in the Middle East.

Liberators nearly arrived from the Middle East bombarded the Mendi airfields north of Athens in might blows to defend invaded Coo, while Mitchells showered fragmentation bombs on the airfield at Argos in the Peloponnese.

Flying Fortresses attacked the railroad yards entering the Brenner pass at Bolzano.

Other Flying Fortresses crashed down explosives on the railroad junction at Pisa, nearly 170 miles above Rome, and planes of the strategic airforce battered other towns to aid the Allied ground troops.

SALEM HIGH ON APPROVED LIST

State Inspector Lauds Educational Setup. Makes Recommendations

Salem High school was given a high rating in the state by State School Inspector F. M. Shelton following a recent inspection. Supt. of Schools E. S. Kerr told the board of education Monday night.

In due time, an official accredited rating will be received from the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. The state inspector made several recommendations. He urged a broadening of the program of work in music and art in the high school, and suggested that an art room be established in the high school building as it is at the Junior High.

Shelton said the high school program has been improved in many particulars, making note of the course in pre-flight aerodynamics offered this year and the addition of the school equipment of a sound motion picture machine.

The library, music, industrial arts and other departmental rooms have adequate facilities for the classes that use them in the high school annex which was constructed recently.

HOW DO YOU WANT TO PAY IT?

Civilians with their noses to the grindstone have nothing to say about the way the war should be fought, but they can decide how it should be paid for. It's their money, and they can decide how they want to handle it. Decisions on taxes still are made in congress by congressmen, and congressmen still listen to the folks back home.

Between now and the end of this year, or early next year, congress will do something about raising more money to pay for the war. It might decide to skip the whole thing, which would amount to abdication of responsibility. That possibility must be considered, nevertheless. Congress actually might try to butter taxpayers with the illusion that taxes aren't going to be any higher than they already are, then soak us with a double dose of bad news after the 1944 election. That is the first thing to guard against in the weeks and months immediately ahead.

If congress accepts its responsibility to secure national solvency with a tax bill, the decision then becomes one of the amount to be collected. The treasury department, which is responsible for advising congress, recommends an additional 12 billion dollars in revenue. Unofficial talk in congressional cloakrooms is that the government is asking for more than it will get. Unofficial talk in general is that the government should get more than it is asking for to compensate for its incredibly high rate of spending. But assume, for the sake of argument, that congress tries to raise an extra 12 billion.

The 12 billion must be squeezed out of the income and savings of every one of us, dollar by dollar, the hard way, just like the taxes already being paid. That's why the decision on how to raise it rests with taxpayers; everything depends on them. There are three main possibilities and one certainty.

The certainty is a sharp increase in excise taxes on luxury items like furs, jewelry and whisky. This is the kind of tax no one objects to but the dealers in the items affected, and they quit objecting when it turns out, as it usually does, that those who have money to spend on luxury items can't be discouraged by exorbitant prices. Boosting excise taxes on luxury items is the only safe and easy standby in the tax-makers' book. Unfortunately, the yield from such taxes is only a drop in the bucket.

The three possibilities of additional revenue-raising are a federal sales tax, an increase in rates on existing income taxes and a complicated now-you-see-it-now-you-don't arrangement known as a "refundable tax." From the standpoint of getting maximum results with minimum effort, a federal sales tax is the best, but the odds are overwhelmingly against it because the Roosevelt administration isn't behind it and congressmen don't like to go out on a limb alone. In view of the fact it is the only standby left to the states for their revenue needs, perhaps this is just as well.

Odds on the tax to be adopted, if any new tax is adopted, favor the "refundable tax." This is a $5 phrase for "compulsory savings." In plain English, it is a scheme for kidding taxpayers into laying out more than they think they can bear by promising to give some of it back when the war is over. In plainer English than that, it is a typical New Era plan for getting more of the taxpayer's money, like the now famous system of taking a cut from a worker's pay check and making it up to him later as social security.

Such a tax would refute the theory that Americans prefer to pay their taxes straight and invest their money the same way. It would virtually eliminate voluntary investment in War Bonds, though this is an effect the experts may never think of until it flies up and hits them on their high foreheads some day when they are running totals on income from all sources. It is, in short, a tax that looks more like someone's idea of how to have fun with figures than a plan to protect the financial security of the United States. Nevertheless, it is being played up as the favorite, which gives taxpayers something to think about when they tell their congressmen what they want and don't want.

The third possibility is upward revision of rates in taxes already being collected, with various minor changes such as elimination of earned income credits, the separate Victory tax and reduction of allowances for dependents. This would be straight taxing without sugar-coating. It would hurt, but then it would be over. There would be no misunderstandings because there would be nothing to misunderstand. It would be plain to all taxpayers, large, medium and small, that there was no way under the sun for their government to spend by the billion without collecting the same way.

There is no political soothing syrup or New Era applesauce in a straight-out tax bill, but in the long run it will work the best. If that is what taxpayers want, they can get it. If they would rather have the illusion of something for nothing, they can get that, too, but it's only temporary.

INFORMATION FOR CONGRESS

There is more at stake than the conduct of the war in the observations being made by the five senators who returned last week from a worldwide inspection tour of United States fighting forces. The conduct of popular government is affected, also.

The chronic weakness of congress is lack of information. While the legislative branch has access to information compiled for and by the executive branch, it is aware of the tendency to reveal nothing that could be omitted more conveniently. In a government of checks and balances, congress needs its own information service. Who would have furnished the information rounded up by the Truman committee if congress hadn't taken the initiative?

Attempts to develop such a system are not encouraged by the executive branches; the curiosity of legislators about affairs in the executive field is resented openly. Congressional junkets are a term of derision, though no one feels called upon to criticize an administrative official for wanting to see for himself how money which congress appropriated is being spent. Legislators touring war zones are traditionally tolerated, never welcomed.

This is due, to some extent, to the absence of any fixed procedure for obtaining information in the name of congress. Congress, itself, has failed to implement itself with the tools it needs, and its makeshift weapons often are inadequate and frequently absurd. However, it looks as though the five senators had come home with ideas that aren't going to be easy to brush off or ridicule.

THE STARS SAY:

For Wednesday, October 6

A DIFFICULT day with much of an open antagonism from those higher up as well as from hidden, peculiar and obscure or intriguing sources. It is read from the prevailing astral influences. There may be many subtle temptations, luring to affections of a sordid or sinister nature, and these may be at the root of want of cooperation from desirable places. Side step these entanglements, safeguard the resources and there is fine prospect of business prosperity, and much pleasure in domestic or affectional relations. The social aspects may prove helpful in placating antagonists.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is while having the definite promise of a happy and prosperous year, with many gratifications in personal and business affairs yet may be lured to failure and sinister experiences through tricky and deceitful snares. Beware all sorts of subtle or obscure intrigues, guard against all traps and snares involving finances as well as reputation, turning away the good will and aid of those in influential positions. With caution and probity there is keen promise of success, and social and affectional gratification.

A child born on this day although good natured, well intentioned and possessed of worthy traits, with ambition and creative talents, yet may be victimized.

Victory is ahead, but it is the considered judgment of our military leaders that we still have a long, hard fight.—Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson.

The major miscalculation of the Japanese was the apparent expectation that the Russian army would collapse under the German grand assault.—Gen. Marshall.

Causes of Foot Trouble Discussed

BY LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
THE CHIEF cause of the weakness and inefficiency of the modern man's (and women's) foot is the modern shoe. According to eminent authority, the feet of American children are well on the way to deformity by the time the child is 10 years old. "By early adult life the foot is deformed to such an extent that the modern person is functionally a cripple."

Dr. Clendenning will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

These are the judgments of an army medical officer who has been for the past few years studying the problem of the functional inadequacy of feet in young and otherwise vigorous recruits.

No one, of course, is proposing that the modern man should go barefoot. Even though it is admitted that the strongest feet in the world belong to the peoples who do go barefoot, or wear only moccasins. But such peoples live in a warm climate with no snowfall, and terrain that is not too rough.

Importance of Sole
The most important item in the modern man's shoe is the sole, no matter what the experts say about the rest of the requirements.

Granted the sole which protects you against hot pavements in summer, and ice and snow in winter, and a thousand sharp points and projections, the main criticism of the modern shoe is that it is too narrow—and narrow in the wrong place.

When you see the Army shoe you must be struck with its width in front which gives it a bulbous appearance. It is wide exactly at the place where the natural foot is wide—across the base of the toes. Compare it to an average stylish shoe and you find that the latter is widest an inch or more further back, across the instep and narrows as it comes towards the toes.

Measuring Shoes
Levine says, "Proper length requires that there should be a space as wide as an ordinary thumb distal to the toenail of the great toe," and that for "proper width the fitter should be able to insert the index finger under the tongue and down towards the toes when the shoe is unlaced."

These principles which are carried out in the Army shoe are the result of many experiments and experiences of army orthopedic surgeons both in this country and in England. The Army shoe in this war is an improvement over the Army shoe of World War I, and in this conflict far less foot trouble is ascribed to footwear than previously.

The commonest foot complaint among the thousands whom the Army doctors have to attend is just plain hurting feet—the result of the strain of marching and standing. This could go on to fallen arches unless rest and treatment were instituted. But as a matter of fact, it may be an indication that the foot is recovering from the effects of its "civilized" footwear and is beginning to become a strong foot.

Exercise is both tiring and strengthening, and after the preliminary rest period, foot exercises are the mainstay in the treatment of weak pedal arches.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Clendenning has seven pamphlets which can be obtained by readers. Each pamphlet sells for 10 cents. For any one pamphlet desired, send 10 cents in coin, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendenning, 235 E. 45th st., New York. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene," and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

WILDCAT 13 by TOM GILL

CHAPTER FORTY

Guided only by those blue, intermittent flashes, they closed again. Blood was trickling down Alter's face; his swollen lips were purple beneath that grisly, unreal light; but always he came on.

And now, over his back and shoulders, Thorpe felt the acid eating into his skin, burning its way beneath his sweat-soaked shirt. In agony he tore his coat away, and like a cat Alter was on him. Almost Franz had him, his steel fingers closing around Drew's neck; but, doubling back, Thorpe wrenched himself away.

Free of those clutching fingers, Drew rose again, but his flesh was on fire. No sound in the darkness but the stabbing torture of the acid would not let him wait for long. Once more the electrodes missed; once more in ghastly bluish outline the room came to life, and just ahead Drew saw Franz bearing down. Crouching, he waited, then with all the power left to him he struck. Full on Franz's jaw the blow landed; a stab of pain darted through Drew's hand; he saw Franz rise upward, stagger, and fall.

Another flash, and Franz lay huddled beside the desk.

On hands and knees Drew crawled to the door, opened it, and fell unconscious to the floor.

Diaz was bending over Drew when he awoke to find himself in a familiar bed.

Seeing Drew's eyes open, the doctor smiled a little dryly. "Sooner or later," he observed, "you or your friend always come to my hospital for repairs. But you are in no great need of me. I have cut away your clothes. They were soaked through with sulphuric acid—luckily for you. Drew moistened his lips. "Where is Alter?"

"In bed up in his laboratory. He will bear the marks of your fight for many days."

"What about Nan?"

"Gloria is with her." Diaz's eyes flared up in sudden anger. "He struck her, that—!" He broke off, and for a time he brooded; then as if to himself he murmured, "Patience." Moving back, he turned on the table light. "I leave you now, but I have one piece of news for you before I go—a cable from Dr. Marvin. A successful operation on your friend Spud was performed this morning."

Drew pulled himself bolt upright in the bed. "You mean, he almost died?"

"You will please to lie down and not disturb that bandage. Yes, he can see." The doctor moved away. "I shall lock your door for the night, and there will be a soldier stationed in the hall. It is better that you remain here. I do this for your safety. Good night."

Drew wondered if he read some special meaning in Diaz's words. He could not be sure. Of one thing alone he was certain—the surgeon's old dislike for him still lingered, but less strongly than before.

It was hours before Drew slept, and then only lightly. The sting of the acid, the memory of that fight, and the restoration of Spud's sight all conspired to drive sleep away. From the corridor outside the slow tread of feet came in to him. Was he in effect under some form of arrest? Or was Diaz alive to some new danger from Franz Alter?

So through the night, between sleep and waking, he lay, while the hands of the little clock dragged their way around the dial. An hour before dawn he heard a car drive up and the sound of low voices. Still later, from Alter's room above him, Drew thought he heard a slight movement, but he could not be sure. Then silence again except for the steadily marching feet outside. Drew closed his eyes.

Dawn trickled feebly through the heavy curtains of the room where Franz Alter lay. Dimly lit, the sleeping figure beneath the sheets; then, strengthening, traced in vague relief the outline of another for standing quietly beside the bed.

For long minutes while the room grew brighter that silent scrutiny went on, and in the eyes of the watching figure was a strange blending of resolution and regret. At last he sighed; softly he touched the shoulder of the sleeping man, and Alter's slate-gray eyes opened.

"Excellency!" Franz made as if to rise, but Gleason's hand pressed on his shoulder.

"Quietly!" Gleason nodded in warning toward the door.

"Something has happened?"

"Much. Someone has bungled. Two hours ago Veraguan police raided the warehouse and found the entrance to the basement. At this moment their trucks are taking away the machine guns and the manifestos. Your stanch friend Diaz led the raid."

Franz's face had turned ashen as the saber scar across his cheek. "How?" he fought for every breath. "How did they learn?"

"What does it matter? All that matters now is that Planet Export is done in Veragua. It means expropriation." Gleason opened and closed his hands. "The money-grubbing democracy to the north will be much amused. And we were so near to marching!"

His voice choked with the bitterness of regret, but when next he spoke it was with the cold detachment of one pronouncing a final judgment. "You have failed, Franz. You let the Rio Bravo field slip through your fingers, you let your wife's money finance Drew Thorpe's well, and now—this raid. The States see Franz does not tolerate failure. It is just as well you do not go home."

On the edge of the bed Gleason laid a small phial, and very slightly the other moved beneath the sheets. For the last time both men looked into each other's eyes, as little drops of perspiration gathered on Alter's lips.

"One plays for high stakes in this game of empire," Gleason's monotone sank lower. "One must pay the price of failure. I go now to report."

Once more the huge form trembled, while through the coming dawn Franz Alter fought for courage, and the impassive figure waited quietly by the bed. Like a blood-stained spear, the first red shaft of sunrise pierced the half-drawn curtains, touching to flame that tiny phial. The slate-gray eyes watched it, fascinated.

Then again the patiently insistent voice. "I am waiting, Franz. Must I—"

"No." Through stiff, unwilling lips he forced the answer. "No. Excellency." Unsteadily his hand reached forward to the phial.

Ten days had brought changes up at Wildcat 13. A bustling survey camp had risen on the savanna; a crew of laborers was widening the road, and long lines of States Oil trucks rumbled up the hill with loads of pipe line. Wildcat 13 was in production!

The shacks had just been replaced by large frame buildings on the morning when Ray Cutter drove up and found Gloria and Drew arranging the furniture.

The States Oil superintendent seemed well content. "This just about winds it up." He tapped the heavy sheaf of papers in his hand. "I never had much doubt that the government would kick through with the permit ever since they discovered the Planet warehouse was a disguised arsenal. But it's just as well to have everything duly signed and sealed. From now on we're in the clear."

He smiled at Gloria. "That father of yours is an old fox. I don't believe he loves us Americans any better than ever, but he's sure boosted his stock with Veraguans and Americans both, the way he cracked down on the Planet outfit. Alter's big mistake was to raise his hand to Nan. That was the one thing Diaz couldn't stand."

With the ever-present handkerchief Cutter wiped his face. "Well, Planet Export is washed up for good."

But Drew shook his head. "Planet Export may be Ray—but not the people who sent them. They'll try again. South America is too rich and too defenseless for them to hold off long."

Cutter shrugged. "I wouldn't know. And it's not one of my worstes." He grinned. "Right now my worry is what to get you two for a wedding present." He turned to Gloria. "How's my old buddy Dr. Diaz feel about your marrying this gringo?"

"He will not even talk of it," the girl answered.

Cutter climbed into his car. "I tell you what—you name the first boy after him, and he'll think the whole thing was his own idea." His face sobered. "What about Nan Alter? Someone said she was going away."

"She's leaving on the next boat for New York," Drew answered. "To live there?"

"I think so. Here there would be too many memories. Back in the States she will find old friends and new ones. She's still young; she can make up for the years Franz Alter stole from her."

Thoughtfully Cutter nodded. "She was one off the best. Her life ought to be just beginning."

Waving his hand, he drove away. Up on the rim of the savanna they stood watching until the dust of Cutter's departure had settled beside the road. Still neither spoke until, reaching up, Gloria kissed Drew's lips.

"Darling, you look so very serious!"

He held her to him. "I was thinking how quickly people put aside unpleasant memories. Already Cutter has forgotten how close the Planet gang came to success."

"And you think they'll come again?"

"When they are ready, they'll come again—unless we too are ready." His eyes turned toward the coast. "There may be hard years ahead, Gloria mia, for us and for all the Americas. It will be a time of testing to see if we deserve to live as a free people should."

She looked up at him. "When that time comes, I want to believe that your people and my people will face it together, just as you and I."

He smiled into eyes that were clear and unafraid. "We can face any future—together."

THE END

OUR NAVY—'ROUND THE WORLD

AMERICA'S RAPIDLY GROWING NAVY is making its force felt in almost every fighting quarter of the world. This map reveals how the U. S. Naval forces are deployed in the various war theaters and in defense of our home shores against any threat of invasion. The North Pacific Force (1) is based on the Aleutians while another force (2) guards the Northwest Sea Frontier covering Alaska and the coast of western Canada. Still another force (3) is deployed to guard the Western Sea Frontier of the U. S. itself. At Pearl Harbor (4) is based our main Pacific fleet, backstopped by the naval units attached to the Hawaiian Sea Frontier (5). The Panama Canal has its own formidable naval force

(6) while "down under" our South Pacific and Southwest Pacific forces, (7) and (8), have been seeing plenty of action in those areas. In addition there is a Southeast Pacific Force (9) which patrols the western coast of South America. On the Atlantic side our naval force in Northern Europe (10) works side by side with the British, while the Atlantic Fleet (11) has been fighting a deadly war against Nazi U-boats. Its activities are supported by naval units of the Eastern Sea Frontier (12), the Gulf Frontier (13), the Caribbean Sea Frontier (14) and the South Atlantic Force (15). In the Mediterranean a special U. S. naval force (16) has been co-operating with the British fleet. (International)

Officer, In Letter, Tells Parents He Was Ready to Die

(By Associated Press)
LOS ANGELES, Oct. 5.—"My dearest parents," began the letter of Navy Lt. (jg) Wallace M. Bonaparte, 26, Los Angeles lawyer.
"I had hoped never to have to write this, for over a long period, even after being sent overseas, I had been safe and secure, but lately I have been in some tight spots. I do not expect to die in this year—no one does—but I am playing on my luck more and more. Only in the event it does not hold out will you get this letter.
"I would not be written now, for I have no premonition of death, were it not that I know full well the place that I and my personal welfare play in your lives and in your hearts. This cannot ease your grief, but it may serve to convey my frame of mind at the prospect of losing my life, and my frame of mind may be of some importance to you.
"At first when I knew I was in danger I thought a lot about it. I worried continually, frantically, at the thought of all the happiness I would miss in my married life that started out so wonderfully, and of how you, who have built your lives around my health and happiness and success, would feel.
"After a while I ceased to think of dying. Now I never do—except in moments like this, when I do so for a definite purpose. I am insured to death. If it comes I am mentally and morally prepared. My primary thoughts out here are of life; of winning the war and returning some day to you and to my dear wife.
"I am deeply conscious of what I am fighting for and would not sit at home during this war if I could. What I fight for is not an abstraction to me. It is not any vague ideal of freedom or democracy. I reduce it to the most elemental of emotions, that of man's instinctive, nominating, intense desire to protect those individuals whom he holds dearest. I don't claim that this is the reason for any other man's participation in the war. It is my own.
"So the fact I may die while I am protecting you does not appall me in the least. If I do I shall be happy to have done what I have to do, and all of the sacrifice and effort on your part to rear me as a good citizen, educated and successful, are not wasted.
"Parents Are Informed
"So although you will grieve, do not, please do not, be bitter. Know that I am smiling here as I write at sea—that I am content, that I am doing what I want to do and must do. Be proud that you did a good job of rearing me to do what was my chief purpose. Live out your lives to the fullest, without loneliness or pain. Wherever I am, I will be at peace, and if there is a haven, I have a clear conscience and clean soul. And know, also, that I love you above all that to me you are the greatest, dearest people in the world."
The parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Bonaparte, were notified that Lt. Bonaparte was killed in action in the South Pacific. The letter, enclosed to an uncle, then was delivered to the father.
"The letter gave us a better realization of the full stature of the boy, of his fortitude and foresight," said the father.
"He was talented in many directions—writing, cartooning, music, the law—and gave promise of doing big things in life. He was wonderful to his parents and his wife, a youngster of whom any parents would be proud."
Lt. Bonaparte joined the Navy in July, 1942, and met death while serving with an amphibious force, his father added.

Italian Newspaper Readers Are Reading Only the News That Berlin Allows Them

LAUD SCHOOL PLAN

at Ohio State: Miss Anna Ruffer of Youngstown, Mahoning county primary supervisor; Dr. Wilda M. Rosebrook, psycho-educational consultant with the bureau of special and adult education at Ohio State. Recommendations made by the group included:
Principals Overburdened
Principals should be given more time to plan activities of their schools and to follow up the work; more books, visual instruction materials and portable bulletin boards should be provided.
Expansion should be made of the present testing system by addition of achievement tests to be given by one person and scored with the help of teachers whose pupils take the test; test forms should be established for Salem pupils; pocket folder type of cumulative record should be instituted for each pupil, simplifying the grading system to two marks, "S" for satisfactory and "U" for unsatisfactory.
Provision should be made for individual difference by ability-grouping of children; the program of studies and time schedules now in effect should be maintained since they represent the most up-to-date practice.

That was how closely the Italian press was controlled and hamstrung by Fascism. It was so tightly bound to the regime that news-appears all over the country had to change hands overnight. Il Messaggero's staff was reputed to be the least Fascist of the Rome papers but the government had to fall before it could get rid of its Fascist publisher and change its policy.
Strict government control of the press had existed for 17 years, since 1926, when the prefects, or provincial governors, were empowered by royal decree to sequester an offending newspaper and, if the offense was repeated, suspend or suppress it. Pro-Fascists meanwhile gained control of the former democratic newspapers.
Within a short time Mussolini was able to call the press his "orchestra." Some recalcitrant editors were beaten up—one, whose family I knew, so badly that he died of the effects.
Until last July 25, therefore, the press was in service collaboration with the government. Mussolini used the times for his "orchestra," using it to extol his policies, glorify his person and play hymns of hate against enemies.
Thinking Public Knew Better
The constant flattery of Fascism, the diatribes against democracy and the monotonous variations on the theme of the day as expressed by Mussolini undoubtedly influenced many Italians. But the thinking section of the public found the standardization of news and editorials, all restricted to the authorized versions from the official font, to be dull and devoid of mental nourishment. Those who could read them bought the papers of other countries, particularly those of Switzerland, for a balanced diet of news and comment.
Censorship was severe. It was imposed through daily mimeographed directives from the propaganda ministry, called in later years the ministry of popular culture. These circulars told the editors what they could print of the day's news, what they must not mention and how they must comment.
Some news was suppressed entirely, as was that of Queen Wilhelmina's appeal to King Vittorio Emanuele to use his "influence" with Germany in Holland's behalf when Italy was non-belligerent.
From the outset of the war, publication of any communications but the German, and later the Italian, was prohibited.
Other news was distorted, as when pertinent passages of speeches by foreign statesmen were suppressed if they were critical of Fascist policies.
No Criticism Tolerated
No criticism of the government, of Fascism, of Mussolini or any of his officials was tolerated.
Following the instructions of the government to the letter, the newspapers were only its voice, never that of the people. They could never express the popular will if it varied from that of the government, nor call for a correction of unsatisfactory conditions, nor even give the public a fair report of the world's news to foster its own thinking. Nobody could express himself on the country's economics or politics in letter columns.
After Italy entered the war, much of the press directives came from Berlin. Now in the part of Italy occupied by the Germans, the newspapers are presumably under Nazi control completely. And most Italians are less informed, more misinformed, than ever.

"At the execution ground, Lieutenant Komai faces the prisoner and says: 'You are to die. I am going to kill you with this Japanese sword according to the Samurai code.'
"The prisoner is made to sit on the edge of a water-filled bomb crater. When I put myself in his place, the hate engendered by this daily bombing yields to ordinary human feelings.
"The Tai commander draws his favorite sword, the famous 'Osamune.' First he touches the prisoner's neck lightly with the sword. Then he raises it overhead. His arm muscles bulge. The prisoner closes his eyes for a second and at once the sword sweeps down.
"Swish. It sounds at first like noise of cutting, but it is actually made by blood spurting from arteries. The body falls forward. Everybody steps forward as the head rolls on the ground.

"Dark blood gushed from the trunk. All is over. There lies the head like a white doll.
"I realize that the emotions I felt just now was not personal pity but manifestations of magnanimity that becomes a chivalrous Samurai."
Then, the diary continued, a medical man took the sword, rolled the American airman's body over on his back and slit the abdomen open with on sweep, commenting, "these thick-headed white bastards are thick belled, too."
The body was then buried.

Yankees, Cardinals Clash In World Series Opener Today

70,000 EXPECTED TO WITNESS FIRST GAME AT STADIUM

Clubs on About an Equal Basis, Writers Claim: Bettors Favor Yanks

BY SID FEDER
NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—The New York Yankees, the St. Louis Cardinals and some 70,000 just-plain-fans moved in on Yankee stadium for the start of a World Series that was as close as butter on your bread to everyone except the gambling guys.

With Spud Chandler, lately the hottest pitcher in the American league, a top-sided 5 to 8½ chance to give Lefty Max Lanier a lesson in the art of throwing a baseball in the opening shindig, the Bronx Bombers drove into the annual fall fuss at the shortest price they've been in more than a decade.

But while the gambling guys put the Yanks on a 5 to 7½ pedestal to win back the World Championship—whether it takes four games or the legal limit—just about everyone else (including the hundreds still looking for series tickets and a place to sleep) were making the return match strictly a case of "you pays your money and you takes your choice."

From all angles it was a "rattle" between the speed and all-round hitting of the "sweethearts of St. Louis" against the noted pitching edge and the extra-base blasting of the Bombers. And this corner likes the Yanks to get those "bombs away" in five games or less.

Record Attendance Seen

The annual tea-party was shooting at the 69,902 "high" mark hit by the Cards and the Yanks in their Sunday game here a year ago. And with all reserved and box seats sold and the bleacher waiting line forming at the right window for 26 hours before post time at 1:30 p. m. (EWT) today, the cash registers were ready to jingle-jangle-jingle the all-time hit tune for what is known hereabout as the fall classic.

The National league insisted Billy the Kid Southworth named Lefty Max Lanier as his first pitcher because he's been steady lately than Mort Cooper, the Cards' 21-game winner, and because Mort's been straightening out a shaky soup-bone.

Getting down to the numbers, however, the St. Louis Larupers are fielding a lineup headed by Stan Musial, the 356 batting king of the National loop. To all of this, the Yanks point out that nobody can run to first base—every batter has to hit his way there.

On form, the Yanks have an edge in both ends of the infield and more particularly in left field, where Charley Keller is the block-buster. King Kong has hit 31 homers this season, leading the American leaguers to their 19th straight campaign of whacking 100-or-more round-trippers. And while the Cards expect their southpaw server-uppers to take care of the New York fireworks, the Yanks point out that it only takes one poke out of the lot to get your name on the scoreboard.

Niles Boxer Wins

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Oct. 5.—Midweight boxer Niles, declared Jerry Maloni of Springfield last night, the only boxer to beat Maloni in more than a year. It was Niles' second victory over Maloni and his 17th straight win in Massachusetts.

The Eagles and Zimmermans stole the show in the American league action on the Masonic alleys last night as the former rolled three 900 games but won only one of them.
The trouble was that Zimmermans also were mowing them down in the first two games. Brad Akens led the way with a 625 series for the Eagles, combining games of 182, 229, 229 and Andy Arnold had two 200 games. Bob Morrow, Johnny Meier and Glenn Oesch contributed one 200 game for Zimmermans.
What really happened in this league standing, however, was confined largely to two teams. Demings won four points to pull into a tie for the lead with Fernengels, who had to be content with 3 and 1.

These old scoring figures can be accounted for by the fact that the American League is scoring on the point system—one point per game and a point for total score. For example, the Eagles, who won only one game, had the high series total so took two points while Zimmermans were taking two.
In the Quaker City league on the Bowling Center alleys Gondas pulled into top position by winning two, dropping Camps into a tie for second with Albright, who copied their series as Camps lost two.

LEE SAVOLD MEETS BLUNT AT AKRON

(By Associated Press)
AKRON, Oct. 5.—Counter-punching Lee Savold will come in about 10 pounds lighter than Eddie Blunt, the Brooklyn Negro, when they clash in a ten-round heavyweight scrap at the armory tonight.

Savold, who did most of his training at Greenwood, N. J., said he would be around 195 while his opponent, who has trimmed such fighters as Buddy Baer, Abe Simon and Tony Musto, is expected to scale 215. Savold will be seeking his 11th straight victory, having knocked out Lou Nova in his last scrap.

"I'm giving away a lot of weight but I think I'll win," declared Savold. After the fight he returns to Greenwood to tune up for a Madison Square garden bout with Tami Maurilio. Blunt was signed last week to meet Pat Valentino, a heavyweight, in a ten-rounder at San Francisco Oct. 18.

The record books list both Savold and Blunt as being 25.
In the eight-round semi final of Tom Stanley's fight card, Fritz Phipps, West Virginia middleweight, will be seeking his 13th straight win. His opponent is Cleo McNeal of Canton, O.

The Sports Scribes Agree It Will Take Five to Six Games

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—The World Series is an open book to the sports scribes, but opinion is about evenly divided on how to read it.
Most of the experts here to cover the opening of the diamond classic today agreed that the Yankees and Cardinals would need from five to seven games to reach a decision, but beyond that it was every man for himself.

Here is a sampling of the scribes' viewpoints:
Sid Mercer, New York Journal-American: Yankees in six games.
John Carmichael, Chicago Daily News: Six games all right, but I like the Cards.
Jud Bailey, Associated Press: The Cardinals to repeat.

Sid Feder, Associated Press: The Yanks in five or hotter pitching.
Paul Menton, Baltimore Evening Sun: Yankees in six.
Jim Schlemmer, Akron Beacon Journal: You just about have to pick the Yanks.
Chilly Doyle, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph: Playing the first three games at home gives the Yanks enough edge to win.

Cleveland Likes Cards
Joe Williams, New York World-Telegram: The Yanks in five or six.
Ed Bang, Cleveland News: Six games—the Cards.
Gordon Gobbledick, Cleveland Plain Dealer: The Cards have so much edge I like 'em in three straight, if necessary.

Max Case, New York Journal-American: Yanks in six.
Frank Graham, Look Magazine: The Yanks.

Charles Dunkley, Associated Press: The Cards are too fast; should do it in six games.
Red Smith, Philadelphia Record: That goes ditto for me.
Harvey Doyle, Pittsburgh Post-Gazette: The Cards to win.
Whitney Martin, Associated Press: The Cards, because they haven't gone down as far as the Yanks.

Leon Efrat, New York Times: St. Louis'll need only five.

Hugh Fullerton, Jr., Associated Press: Yankees—six games.
Jack Cuddy, United Press: St. Louis will do it in seven.
Caswell Adax, International News Service: Yanks in six.
Chet Smith, Pittsburgh Press: The Cards—six games.

Bob Hooey, Ohio State (Columbus) Journal: That goes for me, too.
Bob French, Toledo (O.) Blade: The Yanks—six games.
Martin Haley, St. Louis Globe-Democrat: Who but St. Louis? Six games.
Don Beattie, Salem News: Salem over Leetonia.

Senator Puzzled About Sinkwich's Discharge

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—Franklin Sinkwich, Detroit Lions professional football player and Youngstown, O., native, is a puzzle to Senator Wherry (R-Neb.).

Arguing with many men with physical defects could be used in limited service to reduce the number of fathers who might be drafted, Wherry mentioned Sinkwich in the senate yesterday.

"What's the matter with him?" demanded the Nebraska senator. "Can't he take the place of some man we can send across the water?"
Sinkwich recently was given a medical discharge from the Marine corps.

Early Birds for World Series

A Baltimore grocer, Gordon Roberts, 36, was first in line for a ticket to the unreserved bleacher section at Yankee stadium in New York for the World Series opener. Roberts took up his vigil a full day before the game began. Other earlybirds in line include George Kopel, a vacationing steel worker from Clariton, Pa.; Barney Evans of Hamilton, Canada, and Mrs. Peter Borota from Steelton, Pa. They are shown with Roberts. Leetonia Coach None Too Optimistic About Salem Fray

Salem's 19 to 6 victory as compared to Leetonia's 25 to 6 win over the East Palestine Bulldogs doesn't mean very much, according to Leetonia's coach, J. L. McBride, who watched the Quakers and Bulldogs battle at East Palestine last Friday night.

McBride's whole squad visited Palestine, and saw the Salem team defeat Palestine, but McBride believes the fact that Salem wasn't using two of their varsity men, En-triken and Brian, made a great difference in performance. The Leetonia mentor has seen Salem play all its games this year, including the one in which En-triken took part to defeat Solving 45 to 6.

Coach McBride has had difficulty this season building a team that could withstand the Leetonia record that has been compiled in the last two years. The Blue and White have won 25 out of their last 27 games, and have been beaten only once. Salem tied them in 1941 0 to 0 and East Palestine eked out a one point victory 7-6, last year.

The record compiled by the Class B school is exceptional, especially when consideration is given to the fact that there only 130 boys enrolled in the high school this year. Coach McBride, who also is principal of the High school, has had to build his team around a trio of varsity men from last season. His center, Joe Bernard, Left Half Ed Duco, and Right Halfback Fred Dominic are the only boys left from the once defeated 1942 squad.

The balance of the team has been composed of two freshmen, two

Notre Dame First, Michigan Second In Grid Team Ranking

By Harold Claassen

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—If you are trying to figure out the winner of Saturday's football clash between Notre Dame and Michigan you might want to take the advice of 108 of the nation's sports writers who list the Irish as the country's best and Michigan second.

The same experts also tried to help you decide who is going to win the Navy-Duke scrum at Baltimore the same evening by placing the Middies in fourth place on the first Associated Press poll of the young season and the Blue Devils in fifth. Army grabbed the third rung.

Fifty-three of the voters rated the Irish, winners of both their games to date by top-sided scores, as the No. 1 outfit while 36 decided that the Wolverines were the best. Ohio State's 1942 champion Buckeyes collected 23 points and ranked 18th.

Ten points were given for each first place vote in the balloting, with nine awarded for second and so on down the list.

The leading eleven with total points (first place votes in parentheses):

FIRST TEN
Notre Dame (53)	977
Michigan (36)	880
Army (4)	631
Navy (3)	616
Duke (4)	575
Penn (1)	434
Purdue (2)	392
Iowa Pre-Flight (2)	281
Minnesota (1)	237
Southern California	179

Second ten: Northwestern 123, Great Lakes 112, Memphis Naval Air Technicians 95, Dartmouth 89, Del Monte Pre-Flight (2) 57, March Field 25, Louisiana State 24, Ohio State 23, Northwestern 18, College of Pacific 17.

Etten, Litwhiler Are World Series Cinderella Cuties

By TED MEIER

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—The "Cinderella cuties" of the World Series are Nick Etten, first baseman for the Yankees, and Danny Litwhiler, outfielder for the Cardinals.
A year ago the two were teammates on the Phillies who finished a woeful last in the National league. Now they are regulars on two championship clubs with a nice nestegg coming to them through the World Series. Etten was traded to the Yanks last winter while Litwhiler went to the Cards in June.

Litwhiler was on the train, enroute from St. Louis, while Etten went through batting and fielding practice at the stadium. The ex-Baltimore slugger, who batted in 108 runs for the Yanks during the season, belted one into the right field stands while taking his practice swings. "What a difference from the Phils," he beamed.

Gordon Roberts, of Baltimore, was the first fan in line to buy a bleacher seat, but the guy who was actually there first was the reporter assigned to cover the arrival of the first bleacherite.

Billy Evans, president of the Southern association, wouldn't pick either the Yanks or Cards. "I've no selection," he asserted. "The clubs are too evenly matched in my opinion."

Ziggy Sears was slated to be one of the National league umpires in the series with a chance to call decisions involving his son, Catcher Ken Sears of the Yanks, but illness knocked him out of the assignment.

Just like kids playing catch in the backyard, Tuck Stainback, Joe Gordon and Johnny Lindell made believe they were pitchers while awaiting their turn at bat during practice. They took turns winding up and throwing to Ken Sears who called each pitch a ball or a strike.

Later an ambitious press photographer having "fun" too Sears' place as catcher and caught Lindell, the pitcher turned outfielder. "You'll get your finger broken if you don't look out," warned Bud Metheny but the lens expert just laughed. Lindell cut loose with a fast ball about the tenth pitch. The photographer stopped it with his stomach, instead of the glove. He shook it off and carried on.

Spud Chandler, who will start against Southpaw Max Lanier, wound up his workout by posing with "King Kong" Charley Keller, then running around the field.

Rookie Tom Byrne, a portside, pitched most of the batting practice in an effort to get the Yanks' used to Lanier's curves.

Official scorers will be Gordon Gobbledick, of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, president of the Baseball Writers association; Ken Smith, of the New York Daily Mirror; and Mike Haley, of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

FOR SALE!

8 1/2 ACRES ALL EQUIPPED

This farm is located about nine miles south of Salem on a good road. It is a little rolling but is in a high state of cultivation. About three acres has been stripped for coal. This stripping was done on what you might consider waste land. There is still a large amount of coal under this farm. The thickness of the vein runs about 42 inches. This coal could be taken out very easily with a slope mine.

Is improved with two houses. One house has 7 rooms with electric, furnace, gas and electric pressure water system. Another house of 5 rooms with electric. Good bank barn equipped with 5 stanchions. Garage and other necessary outbuildings.

Will include the following equipment: 5 cows, 2 heifers 2 years old, 1 yearling heifer, 1 bull, 2 horses, 9 shoats, 1 boar, 1 sow, about 70 chickens, set of good harness, John Deere tractor on rubber with plow, cultivators and disc, binder, mower, rake, hay loader, hay wagon, corn walker, corn planter, manure spreader, plow, harrow, roller, spring-tooth harrow, feed cutter, grain drill, McCormick electric separator, about 1000 bushels corn, about from 25 to 30 tons hay, 140 bushels wheat, 150 bushels oats, from 8 to 10 tons of straw.

Now, there is plenty to do on this farm, but if you are a coal operator you can have an income from the coal as well as an income from the farm. Another big item is that you have two houses. You can live in one house and have a house for your hired man to live in. If you are interested in an equipped farm, see me at once! Equipped farms are very scarce and hard to find. A large amount of this machinery is practically new. The tractor does not look as though it had ever been used and is just the right size for farming this land. Price for everything is only $10,500, which is dirt cheap. For more particulars, see first time sought to whittle down German air strength by walloping key airfields.

BOMB NAZI FIELDS

The Mitchells caught a large number of German planes on the ground at Argos, and started many fires, destroying buildings.

P-38s escorted the Mitchells, and all returned safely.

Cairo reported that fighting still rages on Cos, second largest island in the Italian Dodecanese, but did not disclose how the battle was going.

Montesarchio, taken by the Fifth army while this furious display of air strength knocked at the Germans, is on the lateral road to Naples. It is a strong point in the mountains.

The Fifth army has made progress despite difficult country, demolitions, and pockets of enemy resistance, the Allied communique declared.

Exploiting his landing at Termoli to the east, Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery poured in more reinforcements, and British troops beat off a Nazi counterattack in this area with losses to the enemy.

"The Eighth army continues its advance according to plan," headquarters announced.

(Radio France at Algiers declared the Fifth army had advanced to less than 85 miles from Rome which is about 120 air line miles from Naples. The same radio said Field Marshall Albert Kesselring had abandoned all hope of a stand along the Volturno river and was withdrawing rapidly northward toward Rome.

(A Berlin broadcast recorded by Reuters said the Germans had evacuated Corsica, withdrawing troops to the Italian mainland "to take up the new task of defending the southern European flank.")

As Americans Entered Naples

After several days of stiff battles before the city, American forces finally enter the port of Naples, second largest Italian city, to the cheers of welcoming Italians. This picture is a Signal Corps radio-photo. (International)

Dallas Bryan Retires After 44 Years With Phone Company

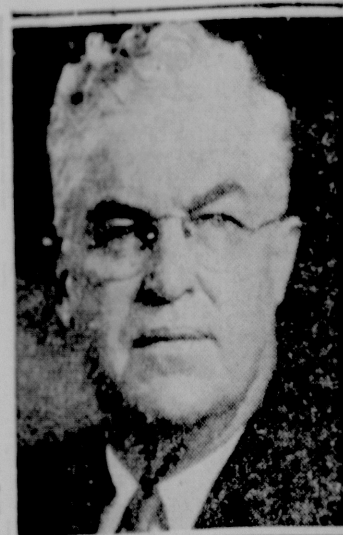

The opportunity of deciding what he wants to do, when he wants to do it—or if he wants to do it—has come to Dallas W. Bryan, 487 E. Seventh st., desk man in the Salem plant offices of the Ohio Bell Telephone Co.

Bryan hasn't been able to do that for a long time, because as a telephone man he has been a servant of the public and the wants and needs of the public have been orders, so far as he was concerned. But now he's retired on pension after 44 years in the telephone business—and that's a long time by any calendar.

Born in Deerfield on Sept. 4, 1878, Dallas Bryan moved to Salem when 12 years old, attending Salem High school and Salem business college. He was the first student to receive a diploma from the business college.

Early in life he worked on the farm of his father, who raised flax which was hauled to a mill near Ravensburg. He entered the telephone business in 1899 with the old Central District and Printing Co. as a timekeeper, but on his first day he was put on line work. As a lineman, he followed in his brother's footsteps. Since then he has held various positions in the telephone business.

Bryan will now have plenty of time to follow his hobbies. One is working in his own shop, which is equipped with power-driven wood-working equipment. The others are golf and gardening.
